The Northwest Company feared that this colony would adversely affect the fur trade and a series of clashes ensued culminating in the massacre of Seven Oaks, June 19, 1816. Selkirk had left Montreal with a contingent of disbanded Swiss mercenaries of the De Meuron and De Watteville Regiments and on August 13, 1816, he seized the Nor' Westers' headquarters at Fort William and arrested several senior partners. The bitter legal conflict which followed terminated with Selkirk's death in 1820 and the union of the Companies in 1821."
